

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest, not a specific political agenda. When large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and special interests and less of what we need for our democracy.

This blatant political commercial is a shameless abuse of the public trust and should not be allowed to happen.
